My name is Jaime Jilozian and I am from West Chester, PA and have been living in Delco for 5 years.

I live and work in two distinctly different communities in Delco, and I think one of the most outstanding things about Delco is the diversity of communities and the built environment that can be found throughout the county. There’s a little bit of everything here and certainly something for everyone.

I am a professional planner with a background in community development. It’s my job to think about long-term impacts on the built environment and how they relate to one’s quality of life.

The positive impacts of open space, parks, trails and nature in general are something that I think we should cherish and preserve so that our future generations can benefit as well.
